Masters Winner Thanks His Chiropractor After Historic Win

By Editorial Staff

Jordan Spieth didn't just capture the hearts of golf enthusiasts worldwide with his record-setting, wire-to-wire victory at the 79th Masters Tournament last month; the 21-year-old prodigy also revealed how important his doctor of chiropractic is to his success, giving him kudos during the traditional Green Jacket Ceremony following the event.

In his speech, Spieth made sure to thank the team "that allow my on-course efforts to come out": his instructor, his trainer – and his chiropractor, Dr. Troy Van Biezen. "They are the best at what they do and I put full trust in them," Spieth said.
